Personal Injury

Barnwell Whaley personal injury attorneys have a long history of representing defending businesses and individuals in cases involving any and all personal injuries, including severe/complex injuries involving death or catastrophic physical and/or neurological injury.

The firm's personal injury attorneys presently represent several institutional clients including insurance carriers who retain the firm to represent their insureds, as well government clients who retain the firm to defend against tort claims involving personal injuries.

Our medical team, lead by nurse attorneys assists the research analysis accounting team in assessing the merit of each case, and possible damages. Sometimes, mediation and arbitration is an option to quickly settle and bring an end to a dispute. However, at times when litigation is necessary, the Barnwell Whaley personal injury team of nationally recognized defense litigators take aggressive, thorough action to provide an effective and efficient defense.
